Please Tell Me a Story

Christy's grandmother is a wonderful story teller. When she comes to visit, Christy loves to climb into her lap and listen as she spins a tale. Sometimes, she reads from a book and makes up funny voices for the animals and other characters. Christy's favorite book for her grandmother to read is Alice in Wonderland. Other times, the stories just come right out of her grandmother's head, and she makes them up as she goes along. Christy is glad that her grandmother has such a good imagination. She tells her that she should write her stories down so that she could share them with other little boys and girls, like in the books they get from the library. Her grandmother smiles when Christy says that because she appreciates her kind and encouraging words. She promises Christy that she will think about it and maybe even send some of her stories to a children's book publisher one day. Christy is just positive the publisher and other children will love her grandmother's stories as much as she does.
