Mr. Inventor

Mrs. Harvey's 4th grade class held a science fair and invited the parents to view their projects. Teresa loves science and wants to be an engineer someday. She stood proudly by her project and answered parents' questions.

One father seemed very impressed with Teresa's experiment. "How did you become so interested in science?" he asked.

"Mrs. Harvey read a story about Benjamin Franklin to our class," she explained. "I especially liked the part that told about his science experiments and inventions. Mr. Franklin was an intelligent and creative man who accomplished many things in his lifetime. His inventions have helped many people, and I want to be just like him."

"I think Mr. Franklin would be very pleased with your project," said the father.

"Thank you," said Teresa with a beaming smile.
