An Architect in the Making

Gerardo's mother asked him what he wanted for his birthday. Without hesitating, he told her he would like a new sketch pad and some pencils because he loves to draw. He draws buildings of all shapes and sizes and has kept a notebook of his sketches since he was three years old. His best and favorite drawings cover the walls in his bedroom, and some get put on the refrigerator in the kitchen.

His art teacher at school considers Gerardo one of her star students, and his mother has agreed to enroll him in an art class at the local community center during the summer. Gerardo is excited about all of this because he plans to study art in college and wants to be a famous architect someday, just like Frank Lloyd Wright.
