

Cookie Contest

Mrs. Norris welcomed her students into her art classroom. She was excited about the class to day because she had good news to share. A local bakery was hosting a cookie decorating contest in honor of National Cookie Day, and her class was invited to participate. She would provide all the ingredients and decorations.

The school principal had given permission for them to use the school kitchen to prepare the sugar cookie dough, cut it into fun shapes, bake the cookies and decorate them with frosting and sprinkles. When Mrs. Norris explained all of this, the students were just as excited as she was. Next Friday would be the big cookie creating event.

Well, even though it seemed like forever, Friday finally arrived. Mrs. Norris's art students did a fantastic job of decorating the cookies in colorful and creative ways. When the judges from the bakery came to inspect and evaluate the cookies, they were quite impressed and awarded the class the blue ribbon for first place. This meant the bakery would donate enough cookies for the whole school to enjoy at lunchtime one day. Mrs. Norris and her students had their picture taken with their cookie creations, and the owner of the bakery submitted it to the local newspaper. They became cookie celebrities. It was great fun and tasty too, because when the judging was finished, the students got to eat their cookies. Happy National Cookie Day!

1. Mrs. Norris teaches _____.
(music spelling art)
2. Her class was going to compete in a _____ decorating contest.
(cookie cake cupcake)
3. They were going to use the _____ to bake the cookies.
(library kitchen teachers' lounge)
4. The students won a _____ for their first place cookies.
(gold star trophy blue ribbon)
5. Mrs. Norris's students were pictured in the local _____.
(newspaper library magazine)

