

Garcia Lopez de Cardenas was the first European to discover the Grand Canyon in 1540 when he was in search of the kingdom of Cíbola and its seven mythical cities of gold. The expedition was organized by Francisco Vazquez de Coronado.

Touring the Grand Canyon takes time due to its immensity. One of the most popular attractions is the glass walkway that seems to float over the abyss. The highest altitude views are in the northern part (North Rim). The most famous panoramic photos are located in the southern part (South Rim). To get an idea of the size of the Grand Canyon, we can say that the trip between one area and another is about five hours by car.

The Grand Canyon is a true world wonder!
